

Edwin Kennedy Heads $5 Million Juniata Centennial Fund

Edwin L. Kennedy, a prominent New York banker and investment counselor, is serving as honorary chairman of the Juniata Centennial Fund.

The fund was initiated in October with advance gifts and pledges of $1.2 million and has now surpassed $1.4 million. Its goal is to raise $5 million for increased endowment by 1976 when the College celebrates its 100th anniversary.

President John N. Stauffer announced the appointment of Kennedy and three honorary vice chairmen at the Centennial Fund inauguration Oct. 13 in Alumni Hall of the Brumbaugh Science Complex. The vice chairmen are:

Robert C. Baker, retired chairman of the board of the American Security and Trust Co. in Washington, D. C.

Dr. George C. Griffith, internationally known heart specialist and professor emeritus of cardiology at the University of Southern California.

Lester M. Rosenberger, president of the National Milling and Chemical Co. of Philadelphia.

Kennedy, a senior partner of the New York investment firm of Lehman Brothers, is a graduate of Ohio University and has served on Juniata's Board of Trustees since 1969. He chaired earlier fund drives for both institutions and also was a trustee for many years at Hiram College in Ohio.

He holds honorary degrees from his alma mater, Juniata, and Findlay College of Ohio. Juniata awarded him the doctor of humane letters in 1968.

In addition, he has been a director of numerous companies including the Kerr McGee Oil Industries, Inc., Trans-Canada

Pipe Lines, The Oil Shale Co., Ingram Corp. and Sunlite Oil Co. He became a partner of Lehman Brothers in 1952.

Robert C. Baker, a member of Juniata's class of 1921, began his banking career with the Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York in the early 1930s and joined the staff of the Central National Bank of Richmond, Va., in 1935. He became a vice president and director of the Richmond bank and then in 1946 accepted a similar post with American Security and Trust.

Baker also is a former president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and has served as a director or trustee of numerous businesses and charitable organizations including Burlington Industries, Inc.; Peoples Drug Stores, Inc.; and Peoples Life Insurance Co.; the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross, Automotive Safety Foundation, National Trust for Historical Preservation and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

He has been a member of Juniata's board since 1956 and is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance.

Dr. George C. Griffith has received many prestigious awards during his long career as a physician and is the author of some 200 scholarly papers on cardiovascular disease published in medical journals around the world.

He served as a personal or consulting physician to a number of nationally recognized sports and political figures such as the late Bert Bell, commissioner of the National Football League, baseball magnates Connie Mack and Branch Rickey and President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Graduated from Juniata in 1921 and from the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia five years later, he holds several honorary degrees including the doctor of laws from Juniata.

Among the many highly esteemed awards he has received are the Gifted Teacher Award of the American College of Cardiology, the World Citizen Award of Hadassah and the Cummings Humanitarian Award for Dedicated Teaching Across the World.

Lester M. Rosenberger has been associated with the National Milling and Chemical Co. since his graduation in 1925 from the Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science. He rose steadily through the company's executive ranks and assumed the presidency in 1960.

A prominent layman of the Church of the Brethren, he served his local congregation for 10 years as moderator and also is a former moderator of the North Atlantic District and a former member of the National Council of Men's Fellowship.

He, too, has had a long and helpful association with Juniata. He was elected to the Board of Trustees in 1952 and became its vice chairman in 1966. The College expressed its appreciation by awarding him the honorary doctor of laws degree in 1972.

Philadelphia Alumni Aiding Admissions Staff

Alumni involvement in the admissions process has received considerable attention during the past few years. Through the leadership of the Admissions Committee of the Alumni Council and the Admissions Office at the College, efforts have been made to find more prospective students and to have alumni keep in touch with these students.

Forms on which alumni could write the names and addresses of prospective students were printed in previous issues of The Bulletin and last spring an entire issue was devoted to the discussion of admissions problems.

All of this helped Juniata meet its goal of a freshman class of 395 students last fall. However, the problem of a dwindling number of college-bound students is expected to plague institutions of higher education throughout the '70s and Juniata is no exception. The nation's private colleges, in particular, will have to recruit strenuously to maintain enrollments.

The Philadelphia Alumni Club, led by president Gwen Woodworth Lang '64, has expressed its willingness to take an active part in student recruiting. A Dec. 11 meeting of eight club members and three Juniata administrators—director of admissions Richard Kimmey, associate director William Asendorf '66 and director of alumni affairs Clayton Pheasant '65—produced a number of concrete suggestions for ways in which alumni can assist the Admissions Office.

For example, alumni are urged to remain informed about things taking place on the campus. In the past few years, numerous changes in educational philosophy, teaching methods, course offerings, etc., have occurred at Juniata with the implementation of the new curriculum. Those at the Philadelphia meeting recognized the need for alumni to return to the College as frequently as possible to talk to faculty members about today's Juniata.

If distance or other circumstances make it difficult to travel to the campus, alumni can become familiar with recent developments by reading Juniata publications, including the catalog and other admissions brochures and folders. Packets of these materials will be sent to all alumni who request them.

It also was decided that the Admissions Office would send the names of prospective students to alumni club presidents each month. The presidents will then be asked to have club members contact the students personally to urge them to consider Juniata. Even after prospective students have been offered admission, it is important to remain in contact with them to maintain their interest in Juniata since many students apply to several colleges and are offered admission to more than one.

In addition, the Admissions Office agreed to give the designation "alumni preference" to students recommended by alumni to ensure these students of careful consideration.

Finally, a project which might be entitled "Alumni Search" was suggested. Alumni would be urged to read articles in their local newspapers about high school students receiving scholastic honors who would then be contacted by alumni and the Admissions Office.

The meeting lasted for three hours with everyone involved contributing to the discussion. Moreover, it was felt that similar meetings or workshops should be held in the future to involve more alumni from Philadelphia and other areas.

'State of the College'

Council Meeting Well Attended

By CHUCK BROWN '59, President of the Alumni Council

Forty loyal and enthusiastic Juniataans crowded around the tables in the Faculty Lounge of Ellis Hall on Jan. 26 to participate in one of the best attended Alumni Council meetings in Juniata history. From 9:30 a. m. until 12:30 p. m. the group worked hard on business of concern to all alumni.

President Stauffer welcomed the participants and commented on the state of the College. He said higher education is experiencing "a new depression" in the 1970s. The severe depression in the 1930s also had a profound effect on higher education, but its effects were felt by everyone, Dr. Stauffer remarked.

However, the new depression of the 1970s is not affecting all Americans equally. There are depression conditions in some occupations and professions while at the same time other sectors of the economy are burgeoning, he continued. The effects of the energy crisis, for example, have not been equal.

He said the three main problems facing Juniata and other private colleges in the '70s are: (1) financial difficulties, (2) maintaining enrollments and (3) remaining independent.

Referring to the problem of finances, he spoke of the distressing situation facing qualified faculty members who can't find teaching jobs and he revealed that Juniata would have to spend $100,000 more than it had budgeted for fuel during the current fiscal year.

"We're now in the process of trimming other budgets because we can't afford to carry a large deficit to another year," he added.

SHRINKING STUDENT POOL

The enrollment problem stems from the fact that colleges must compete for a smaller pool of young people since a good many high school graduates are "opting out" of higher education, at least for a few years. Moreover, the financial necessities of many families are forcing them to send their children to neighborhood community colleges.

President Stauffer also pointed out that virtually all private colleges in Canada were forced by various kinds of pressure to become public institutions. He referred to Temple, Lincoln and Pitt as examples of the same trend in Pennsylvania.

"My idea of Juniata is that it must remain independent to be the kind of college we want it to be," he declared, insisting that it is vitally important to our society and our political system to maintain a system of private education in America.

Nevertheless, Dr. Stauffer feels that private colleges will need financial assistance from government "under conditions which do not interfere with our independence."

Finally, he expressed confidence in Juniata's ability to survive all the problems facing it during the crucial years ahead and to continue making a valuable contribution to society during the College's second century.

ALUMNI TOURS PLANNED

Following the President's remarks, the Council handled several significant items of business. Shirley Detweiler Lingenfelter '55, vice president and chairman of the Alumni Club Committee, noted that many alumni would have an opportunity to see the Juniata Concert Choir during its 1974 tour. The choir's itinerary this year includes several concerts in areas where there are concentrations of alumni.

Mrs. Lingenfelter also opened a discussion about whether the Alumni Association should sponsor "alumni tours." Tours lasting about a week and costing approximately $400 per person received favorable comment. It was felt they would provide pleasurable vacations abroad in the congenial company of other alumni, while boosting Juniata spirit. The Council voted unanimously to look into the possibility of conducting such a tour during the coming summer.

The report of the On-Campus Committee dealt primarily with reunions. Clayton Pheasant '65, director of alumni affairs, said class reunions will be held this year on the weekend of May 24-26. Moreover, it was decided that Juniata will use the "quintennial" system with classes holding reunions at five-year intervals. Moreover, it has been Juniata's custom to have special celebrations for classes observing the 10th, 25th and 50th anniversaries of their graduation. If you are in any of the reunion classes, you will want to mark your calendars now and you can expect more communication in the near future.

HELPING RECRUIT STUDENTS

Reporting on admissions, Dick Dodge '57, chairman of the Admissions Committee, stressed the need for alumni to help by referring students to the College. Juniata is still reviewing applications for next fall and alumni are encouraged to forward the names of prospective students to the Admissions Office and to talk personally with college-bound students who have not yet decided which institution they will attend.

Dick Kimmey, director of admissions, reported that the names of students accepted for 1974 have been compiled and mailed to local club presidents. The presidents should enlist the aid of other alumni in a program of follow-up contact with the students. This indication of alumni loyalty generally impresses students and will make them more likely to select your alma mater. If you are interested in helping with this program, contact your club president or the Alumni Office.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

In another very significant action, the Council voted unanimously to draft an amendment to the Alumni Association constitution and submit it to the association membership for a vote. The amendment, if passed by a two-thirds majority, would increase the number of elected Council members from three to six each year and provide for a total of 18 members at large.

This suggestion for increasing the representation on the Council when the national trend seems to be toward the consolidation of power illustrates the involvement of Juniata alumni in the concerns of their alma mater. I urge you to use the opportunity to vote with the clip-out coupon on the next page.

William E. Swigart, Jr., '37, is congratulated by President Stauffer following the successful completion of a second National Endowment for the Humanities matching campaign. Swigart, Huntingdon insurance executive and realtor, chaired the campaign committee.

Encouraging Developments

NEH MATCHING GRANT

Because of its successful matching effort, Juniata will receive an additional $43,750 from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The NEH had offered to match dollar for dollar whatever the college could raise from its own constituencies up to $43,750. The total of $87,500 will be used to expand the collection of the Beeghly Library, particularly in the humanities.

William E. Swigart, Jr. '37, Huntingdon insurance executive and realtor, chaired the committee which raised the matching funds. Some 120 donors contributed to the drive.

This raises to almost $340,000 the total amount which Juniata has received since the spring of 1972 from the NEH and matching contributions. The National Endowment first gave the College a grant of $200,145 to develop an innovative liberal arts curriculum and later offered an additional $25,000 in another matching effort which also was successfully completed.

Other members of the committee participating in the matching gift campaign were James H. Foster '39, Bethlehem, Pa.; Earl D. Croner '38, Berlin, Pa.; Dr. Harry L. Baird '48, Elizabeth, N. J.; Glenn F. Williams '29, Altoona, Pa.; Gerald F. Hartzel '51, Souderton, Pa.; Hoyt D. Walter '68, Philadelphia, and Alfred P. Crease '50, Huntingdon Valley, Pa.

TWO DU PONT GRANTS

E. I. Du Pont De Nemours and Co. of Wilmington, Del., has awarded Juniata a $5,000 "College Science Grant" and a $1,000 "Discretionary Fund Grant."

The larger grant will be given to the chemistry department for the purchase of library materials and laboratory equipment and to help defray the costs of field trips and faculty travel.

The discretionary grant will be applied to Juniata's Annual Support Fund, used to sustain the general teaching program and to provide financial assistance to needy students.

EDUCATION FOR PRISONERS

Juniata has received an additional grant of $22,053 to continue its Corrections Education program, designed to reduce recidivism, the return to prison of released offenders who again commit crimes.

The grant was awarded to Juniata by the Governor's Justice Commission, which has given the College two previous stipends for the program. Application was made jointly with the Pennsylvania Bureau of Corrections.

Conducted both on the campus and within the walls of the Huntingdon Correctional Institution, the program entered its third academic year this month. It is based on the premise that released prisoners will have a better opportunity to adjust to their return to society, and to retain a job, if they are offered educational insights into their own and others' behavior.

Juniata faculty members are presently teaching five courses at the prison and about 60 inmates are each taking one or two of these courses. The courses being taught are Basic Accounting, Introductory Psychology, Deviant Behavior (a second-level sociology course), two sections of a 20-week writing program and Love, Laughter and Life (an English Literature unit).

In addition, three prisoners are allowed to study at the College each term.

Robert J. Lakatos, instructor in sociology, directs the program which was developed originally by Dr. Duane F. Stroman, associate professor of sociology and assistant academic dean.

Stroman, creator of the program, will serve as project monitor. Other Juniata faculty members teaching at the Huntingdon Institution are Charles W. Wise, instructor in economics and business administration; Gregory Giebel, assistant professor of sociology; Gerald J. Croce, assistant professor of English; and Melanie Gilfillan and Frima Christopher, both instructional assistants in the writing program.

Dr. George L. Detweiler Dies

The Rev. Dr. George L. Detweiler '28, a member of Juniata's Board of Trustees for more than 20 years, died Jan. 17 at his home in Greencastle, Pa.

Dr. Detweiler, aged 70, had been a trustee since 1953 and also served on the board from 1947 until 1950. He was a member of the Buildings and Grounds and Resource Development Committees and formerly chaired the Church Relations Committee.

A former pastor of the Stone Church of the Brethren on the Juniata campus (1937-41), Dr. Detweiler retired from the active ministry in 1971 but continued to serve as a supply pastor to congregations in the Greencastle area.

Born in Johnstown, Pa., he studied music at Juniata and did graduate work at Western Theological Seminary, Auburn Theological Seminary and the University of Pittsburgh. Elizabethtown College honored him with the doctor of divinity degree in 1949.

He began his ministry in the Salisbury, Beachdale and Garrett, Pa. charge and later served congregations in Indianapolis (the Northview Church) and at Huntingdon, Waynesboro, Meyersdale and Greencastle, Pa.

Active in regional and national agencies of the church, he chaired the National Music Committee, the General Brotherhood Board and Fraternal Relations Committee and served for three years on the Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches.

Many of Dr. Detweiler's relatives attended Juniata, including his wife, the former Zola Pearl Meyers '27; Lois Detweiler Norris '25, a sister; Dr. Donald Norris '50, Philip E. Norris '53, Dr. Wilfred G. Norris '54 and Dr. Arthur G. Norris '59, nephews; Mary Howe Robinson '34 and Martha Howe Baker '33, cousins.

"Dr. George Detweiler was a man of rare devotion to his church," President Stauffer said. "He was a dedicated pastor and a respected leader in both church and community affairs. His selfless career was a great credit to Juniata, his alma mater; he loved his college and served her faithfully as a trustee."

Juniata Participating In 'Floating College'

Juniata is one of 12 institutions of higher education in Central Pennsylvania expected to participate in a "floating college" program proposed by the Southern Alleghenies Planning and Development Commission.

The idea is to use existing buildings and facilities, but to transport students enrolled in the "Southern Alleghenies Career Institute" from one campus to another so that they can benefit from the best training available in a six-county area. The students would come from disadvantaged families in Appalachia and would be working toward associate degrees.

A grant to fund the planning of the project has been made available and a 12-month feasibility study dealing with projected costs, administration and curriculum was undertaken.

Other institutions involved are the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown, St. Francis College at Loretto, Mount Aloysius Junior College at Cresson, the Altoona campus of Penn State, Cambria-Rowe Business College, the Altoona School of Commerce and five vocational-technical schools in the area: Greater Johnstown, Admiral Peary, Altoona, Somerset and Huntingdon.

SHOEMAKER GALLERIES

An exhibit by the Standing Stone Art League is on display in the Shoemaker Galleries until the end of February. The league has some 70 members in Huntingdon, Altoona, Roaring Spring, Saxton, York and other communities.

Alumni Profile

Dr. Gray Recalls Wartime Experiences

DR. J. GLENN GRAY '36 and his wife, Ursula, have related some of their World War II experiences for a segment of a 26-part syndicated television documentary that traces the history of the war.

The series, "The World at War," was produced by a British company, Thames Television, at a cost of $3 million and is narrated by Laurence Olivier. Dr. Gray and his wife, a former German citizen, were flown to London where they were interviewed.

Dr. Gray, now a professor of philosophy at Colorado College and the author of numerous books and articles, served in the Army for four and a half years during the war. He also returned to Germany during the American occupation and served as an education official. In fact, he was instrumental in reopening the University of Munich, which had been closed because many of its professors were members of the Nazi Party. He met his wife in Munich during the occupation.

Mrs. Gray was interviewed about her memories of the bombing of Dresden and her life in the ruins afterward. Dresden was bombed by the Allies in February of 1945 and Mrs. Gray lived there until May of that year when she and her sister fled the city on bicycles to escape the Russian advance.

When the Grays were married, Ursula immediately lost her German citizenship and they had to leave Germany within 30 days. She became an American citizen three years later under a special naturalization law for war brides.

A native of Mifflintown, Juniata County, Dr. Gray earned his bachelor's degree with magna cum laude honors at Juniata and also holds a master of arts degree from the University of Pittsburgh and the Ph.D. from Columbia University.

He joined the Colorado College faculty in 1948 and was the first recipient of the prestigious Carlton chair. In 1967 he was named a senior fellow of the National Foundation for the Arts and Humanities. He was on sabbatical leave in Europe at the time, working with the famous German philosopher Martin Heidegger.

Dr. Gray also served as the editor of a series of works by Heidegger and is the author of "The Warriors," "Hegel's Hellenic Ideal" and three Harper Torchbooks published in 1970, plus a number of articles in Harper's Magazine and other nationally circulated periodicals.

In addition, he has been a Guggenheim Fellow, a Fulbright Research Scholar, a Ford Faculty Fellow, a Fellow of the National Council on Religion in Higher Education and a visiting lecturer at the New School for Social Research in New York City.

Juniata conferred the honorary doctor of laws degree upon him in 1971.

He returned to Juniata in January of 1973 as the first visiting scholar of a new program sponsored by the Humanities Division, spending a week on the campus lecturing to philosophy classes and to freshmen in the Human Existence-Historical courses.

WARSAW PHILHARMONIC

Oller Auditorium was filled for the Artist Series concert on Jan. 21 by the 100-piece Warsaw Philharmonic. Many people in the audience said they were impressed by the conducting style of young Zygmund Rychert, who replaced Andrezej Markowski when the latter suffered a heart attack after the orchestra had begun its American tour.

Officially designated as the national orchestra of Poland, the Warsaw Philharmonic also has toured Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia. In fact, its press releases claim that no other orchestra in the world has given as many foreign concerts over the past 15 years.

Remaining programs in the 1973-74 Artist Series will be presented Tuesday, March 12 by Israeli pantomime Zwi Kanar; Sunday, March 17 by the University of Illinois Jazz Band and Monday, April 22 by multi-media specialists Chick and Ann Herbert. The presentation by the Herberts is entitled "Synesthesia" and utilizes some 25 slide projectors as well as elaborate sound equipment.

THE ENERGY CRUNCH

Juniata probably will spend some $100,000 more than it had budgeted for fuel during the 1973-74 heating season. As every homeowner knows, fuel oil prices have doubled since the budget was prepared just about a year ago.

Most of the campus is heated by oil and natural gas. Responding to environmental concerns, the College converted much of its heating equipment from coal to oil in 1969.

President Stauffer appointed an Energy Conservation Committee in November. Committee members were asked to suggest energy-saving steps and to urge the need for conservation among fellow students, faculty members and administrators. Co-chairmen of the committee are Dr. Ray L. Pfrogner, assistant professor of physics, and Sam A. Sirianni '76.

Office and departmental budgets were trimmed to make up for the increased fuel costs.

BENJAMIN FOX SCHOLARSHIPS

Some 420 persons attended the annual meeting of Huntingdon, Business and Industry, Inc. Jan. 24 in Ellis Hall cafeteria. The highlight of the evening was the presentation of plaques to Robert Zeligman, president of the Gerbo Footwear Corp. and Benjamin Fox, founder and president of the Elco Corp., manufacturers of electrical connectors. Elco has plants in Willow Grove, Pa., and El Segundo, Calif., as well as Huntingdon.

Fox presented a $1,000 check to President Stauffer to establish a scholarship fund at Juniata and announced that the same amount would be contributed to the fund each year. Preference in selecting the recipients will be given to children of Elco employees and needy students from the Huntingdon area.

President Stauffer expressed the College's appreciation and said the scholarships would be named for Fox.

Year of the Coaches

Rams' Owner Calls Chuck Knox Another Lombardi

Juniata alumnus Chuck Knox has been a head coach in the National Football League only for one season, but he already is being compared with the late Vince Lombardi and Miami's back-to-back Super Bowl winner Don Shula.

After Knox's Los Angeles Rams Scored an impressive 24-7 mid-season victory over Green Bay, Ram owner Carroll Rosenbloom remarked: "Knox has all the qualities of a Vince Lombardi and a few more he'll show before it's all over."

Chuck Knox

Los Angeles went on to post a 12-2 record and Knox was named professional Coach of the Year by the AP, UPI, Pro Football Weekly, the Pro Football Writers Association and the Touchdown Club of Washington, D. C., among others.

The UPI story announcing his selection for its award noted that he had received 30 of the 39 votes cast by a panel of sportswriters in NFL cities and also pointed out that he "could have a shot of matching Don Shula's record of 105 victories in his first decade as a head coach." Shula, the story added, won eight and lost six in his initial season.

Knox, a 180-pound tackle and co-captain of Juniata's first undefeated and untied team in 1953, called his selection as coach of the year "a great honor" but insisted that most of the credit should go to the Ram players and management and his assistant coaches.

"A lot of other assistant coaches are in football who, if given the opportunity to be a head coach, would do a great job," he added.

Knox had spent 10 years as an assistant in the NFL (four with the New York Jets and six with the Detroit Lions) before his opportunity came along. While he was with the Jets, he helped sign fellow Western Pennsylvania Joe Namath for an estimated $400,000 in cash and other benefits, the largest package ever offered to an athlete until then. Knox also was credited with developing the offensive line which did an outstanding job protecting the brittle-kneed Namath.

With the Lions, Knox was an assistant to Joe Schmidt, who resigned after the 1972 season. The Lions, however, didn't offer the head job to Knox and he headed west to Los Angeles.

"You know, a lot of people wanted this job, a lot of good people," Rams' owner Rosenbloom said later. "We flew Knox out from Detroit five different times and he convinced me more each time."

Knox kept telling Rosenbloom: "I can win for you."

"He kept saying it over and over," Rosenbloom added. "The confidence he showed me transmits to his players and coaches. And he wins with great dignity—he never changes."

The Juniata alumnus seldom shows his emotions on the field.

"Everything is done before the game—there's no need for him to be emotional once the whistle blows," explains quarterback John Hadl. "By game time, Knox and his staff have done everything conceivable for us to win. We are prepared beyond anything you could believe."

Hadl, traded by San Diego to the Rams before the season began, also declared: "Look, coming to Los Angeles was the greatest thing that ever happened to me. I've played under some great coaches, but he's the greatest. And what makes the whole thing complete is the great person Knox is."

Knox, incidentally, married the former Shirley Rhine of Huntingdon while he was at Juniata and they now have three daughters and a son.

NADZAK 'ROASTED'

Juniata's football team was honored Feb. 8 at a banquet sponsored by the Huntingdon Country Club. Richard C. Coffman '50 served as master of ceremonies while head coach Walt Nadzak was "roasted" by a variety of speakers.

He studied history and political science as an undergraduate and had a B average. After his graduation, he remained at Juniata for a year and served as an assistant coach under Bob Hicks. The Indians were unbeaten in eight games that season.

In addition, he spent a year as an assistant at Tyrone High School, three seasons as head coach at Ellwood City High School in the WPIAL, two years at Wake Forest University and two more at the University of Kentucky before he joined the Jets.

The only sour note of the 1973 season for Knox's Rams was their loss to Dallas in the first round of the pro playoffs. Their 12-2 mark gave them a tie with Miami and Minnesota for the best pro record of the year. In addition, no other team in the championship-studded history of the Rams had won 12 games in a single season.

Fellow Coaches Honor Nadzak

When he was asked how it felt to be named Coach of the Year in the NCAA's District II, Juniata's Walt Nadzak smiled and said:

"I'm the same guy who had a losing season two years ago."

The reputation of coaches, however, rises and falls with their won and lost percentage and Nadzak's 1973 record speaks for itself. He led Juniata to a 10-2 mark and the finals of the NCAA's first national small-college playoffs.

"Naturally, I'm thrilled," Nadzak added. "It's the highlight of anyone's coaching career and it's a real tribute to our team and the entire coaching staff. It's more than an individual award. It speaks for the whole program and the school."

With some 20 lettermen returning and a total of 109 eager candidates reporting on the opening day of practice, Nadzak was anticipating a good season. The Indians had compiled a 6-3 record in 1972 and scored an impressive 110 points in the final three games.

But even the most optimistic Juniata fans couldn't have predicted the 28-3 victory over larger Gettysburg College in the '73 opener, the come-from-behind 15-9 win that ended Westminster's 12-game streak and the surprisingly one-sided 35-14 triumph over Bridgeport in the first round of the playoffs. Even the 41-0 loss to Wittenberg in the championship game (the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl) at Phenix City, Ala. couldn't dim the lustre of a super season.

Nadzak has been at Juniata for five years now and has a cumulative record of 26-18-3. He came to Huntingdon in 1969 from Muskingum College, where he had served as a line coach for four years. Muskingum teams he helped mold won 31, lost 5 and tied 1.

A native of Ambridge, Pa., he graduated from Denison University in 1957. He received All-Ohio Conference honors three years as a lineman and was a co-captain and the most valuable player as a senior.

In addition, he earned a master's degree in education at Xavier of Ohio, attained the rank of captain in the Marine Corps and played service football for three years at Quantico and Okinawa. After his discharge, he also played two seasons of pro ball for the Columbus Colts of the United League and coached high school ball for five years at Chillicothe, Utica and Sylvania, Ohio.

Nadzak and the eight other sectional winners received their awards Jan. 10 at the Kodak Coach of the Year dinner in San Francisco. Some 1,200 college coaches attended the dinner, held each year in conjunction with the national meeting of the American Football Coaches Association. The winners were selected by almost 3,000 voting members of the AFCA.
